Analysis:

- Students pointed out that there had been no outings. They expressed the need for such activities to enjoy and build strong bond with the college community.
- Students suggested evolving beyond subjective knowledge and enhancing practical knowledge through examples and activities. They also noted that while teachers often read and helped them, they recommended that teachers connect students through active participation, shift towards student-centered teaching, and use current scenarios to grasp students' interest.

Analysis

- A significant majority of respondents express confidence in the faculty's ability to comprehensively cover the syllabus, indicating strong student satisfaction with both the curriculum and the teaching methods. This reflects positively on the college's commitment to quality education. The syllabus was relevant to the contemporary world and suitable for the placements in job market.
- With a significant majority indicating agreement or strong agreement, it's evident that many teachers utilize ICT tools while teaching. This integration of technology enhances learning experiences and prepares students for the digital age, reflecting positively on the faculty's adaptability and commitment to innovative teaching practices. However, there is room for improvement in expanding the use of ICT tools to ensure even greater engagement and effectiveness in the classroom.
